FINCA FLICHMAN

PRODUCER

Finca Flichman, in southern Maipú, Mendoza, is one of Argentina's oldest and most prestigious wineries. It was founded in 1910 by Don Sami Flichman, who emigrated to Argentina from Łódź, Poland and established the estate's first vineyards on the rocky, well-drained plots within the town of Barrancas. In 1947, Don's son Isaac and winemaker Raúl de la Mota created 'Caballero de la Cepa', one of the first premium Argentinian wines to have international success. Today, winemaking is overseen by Rogelio Rabino, supported by acclaimed consultant and winemaker Alberto Antonini, as well as renowned soil and vineyard mapping expert Pedro Parra.

VINEYARDS

Finca Flichman's 228-hectare estate is located in Tupungato, Uco Valley, at 3,600 feet above sea level, where abundant natural resources and access to fresh water create ideal conditions for grape cultivation. As a pioneer in extreme viticulture, the estate employs advanced technological equipment to manage its high-altitude vineyards, which benefit from mineral-rich alluvial soils. These conditions enable the production of high-quality grapes that express the unique characteristics of this exceptional region.

VINTAGE

The 2021 vintage was characterised by mild, humid conditions that resulted in slower ripening compared to previous years. These conditions produced wines of notable freshness and equilibrium, reflecting the vintage's cooler growing season.

VINIFICATION

Grapes were hand-picked and underwent fermentation over 15 to 20 days at a maximum temperature of 26°-28°C. Complete malolactic fermentation was carried out. The wine aged for 18 months in first and second-use oak casks ranging from 500 to 2,000 litres, followed by eight months of bottle ageing to ensure optimal integration and development before release.

TASTING NOTES

The wine displays an intense ruby red colour with violet hints. The nose offers spiced plum, black cherry, clove, and lavender, complemented by dried herb notes. The palate is complex and full-bodied with silky tannins, delivering a persistent, fruit-forward finish that showcases the wine's depth and elegance.
